

Electrical Engineering

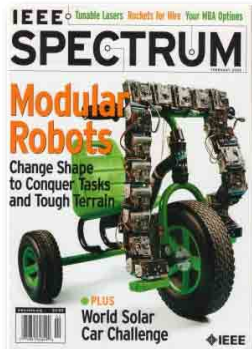

Whether dealing with electronics, electricity, or electromagnetism, electrical engineering is a vital profession in our modern world of gadgets and circuitry. From computers to control systems to telecommunications, the science of manipulating electricity to power our society has given us amazing conveniences and technological accomplishments. From power generation to wiring to capacitors and diodes, the many facets of this crucial niche are important to maintain and build upon. For this reason, it is crucial that companies find professionals with the best educational backgrounds from the best schools - like MIT, Berkeley, or Oxford - as well as the right experience and skills to perform above the status quo.

The Ropella Electrical Engineering Team understands the unique recruitment challenges faced by this wide-ranging industry. Our understanding of your company, your customers and current industry trends means we can find just the right fit, quickly and efficiently. Our Executive Search Consultants are likely members of the same trade associations and attend the same events as you and potential candidates for your company.

We have proven our ability to help companies grow and prosper by developing their most important competitive advantage - talented people. You can count on us to find the right talent to drive your business forward.
